PREFACE

△ This Note describes the organizational arrangements and policymaking relationships for the direction of defense policy at the highest levels of the Soviet system in peace and in war, drawing on both primary Soviet sources and Western analyses. It also provides a history of the occupants of senior command positions in the Ministry of Defense over the past 10 to 20 years, displaying this information in various forms and identifying the military commands that have served as stepping-stones to higher responsibility in the Soviet high command. The Note provides information on organizational and personnel changes through February 1987. ▽

The research documented in this Note was conducted under the "Soviet Civil-Military Relations" project of the National Security Strategies Program, funded by Project Aik FORCE. The background material in the Note is intended to assist students of Soviet politics in analyzing the significance of personnel shifts and possible reorganizations in the Soviet military command structure.

SUMMARY

THE SOVIET HIGH COMMAND

The peacetime high command of the Soviet defense establishment includes the Defense Council, the collegium and the Main Military Council of the Ministry of Defense (MoD), and the General Staff. It may also now include a revived Headquarters of the Supreme High Command (Stavka V GK).

The Politburo of the Communist Party of the Soviet Union (CPSU) oversees the activity of the high command in peacetime and would almost certainly continue to do so in wartime. The CPSU general secretary, currently Mikhail Gorbachev, apparently serves as the supreme commander in chief of the Soviet Armed Forces in both war and peace.

The Defense Council, a joint civilian-military body composed of high-ranking members of the party, government, and military, is the highest peacetime government decisionmaking body for all matters related to national security. The CPSU general secretary has apparently served as chairman of the Defense Council since its inception in the 1950s.

In wartime, members of the Defense Council would probably constitute a unified strategic leadership organ similar to the State Defense Committee of World War II to direct the overall war effort. The CPSU general secretary, supreme commander in chief, would head the committee, which would also include the other most important Politburo members.

The collegium of the Ministry of Defense advises and assists the minister of defense in the direction and management of the Soviet Armed Forces in peacetime. It may also serve as the Main Military Council.

The General Staff, operating under the direction of its chief and the minister of defense, serves as the central planning and directing organ of the Soviet Armed Forces. It also coordinates the activities of the five services—the Strategic Rocket Forces, the Ground Forces, the Air Defense Forces, the Air Forces, and the Navy—and of the other services and directorates, the military districts, the groups of forces abroad, the fleets, and the air defense districts.

The Stavka VGK, if it exists in peacetime, stands prepared to assume the overall direction of Soviet military operations in the event of war. If it does not exist in peacetime, it would be reconstituted on the eve of or early in a war. Its membership probably is (or would be) limited to the CPSU general secretary/supreme commander in chief, the minister of defense, the three first deputy ministers of defense, and perhaps the second-ranking CPSU secretary.

The 400,000-man Strategic Rocket Forces, established in 1959, control the intermediate- and intercontinental-range ballistic missiles deployed throughout the USSR. The Ground Forces, the largest of the five services, consist of some 1,991,000 troops. The Air Defense Forces, comprising 371,000 troops, both defend the USSR against aircraft and missile attack and support the Ground Forces in operations within and beyond the Soviet borders. The Air Forces, with 453,000 troops, include heavy and medium bombers, tactical fighters, fighter-bombers, armed helicopters, and transport aviation. Since the 1950s, the 451,000-man Navy has attained oceanic capabilities.

REGIONAL COMMANDS

Regional commands would direct the wartime operations of most Soviet forces. Many such commands--those of forces in the four theaters of military operations (TVDs), the four groups of forces abroad, the sixteen military districts in the USSR, the five air defense districts, and the four fleets -play significant roles in peacetime as well.

In wartime, the high commands of TVD forces would be subordinate to the Stavka VGK, which would direct their activities through the General Staff. This arrangement would permit centralized control of strategic planning and decentralized battle management. The Soviets have apparently established high commands for the Western and Southwestern TVDs in Europe, the Southern TVD in Southwest Asia, and the Far Eastern TVD, which covers Mongolia, China, Korea, Vietnam, and Japan.

The four groups of Soviet forces in Eastern Europe--the Group of Soviet Forces Germany, Northern Group of Forces (Poland), Central Group of Forces (Czechoslovakia), and Southern Group of Forces (Hungary)--ensure that the Eastern European states remain under Soviet political rule and provide a forward-based military capability for offensive and defensive operations against NATO. The USSR also maintains an independent army in Mongolia serving similar purposes with regard to Soviet interests in the Far East.

The 16 military districts, under the control of the Ministry of Defense, serve primarily to train and mobilize troops so as to ensure a high level of combat readiness. Forces in 13 of the 16 have probably been designated for wartime service under the direction of one of the four TVD high commands that exist in peacetime or a fifth that might be added in wartime. Forces in the Moscow, Volga, and Ural military districts apparently form the wartime Central Reserve.

The four fleets--Baltic, Black Sea, Northern, and Pacific--operate under the Main Staff of the Navy, which in turn receives overall guidance from the General Staff. In wartime, these fleets would participate in oceanic operations under the main naval staff (within the broad strategic plans developed by the General Staff and approved by the Stavka VGK) or directly support a land-based TVD high command.

Four appendixes provide a history of the occupants of senior command positions, identifying those who have served in the key regional commands and showing the changes in the high command since Chernenko's ascent to power. The top MoD officials are also listed by name and position.

I. THE SOVIET HIGH COMMAND

The peacetime high command of the Soviet defense establishment consists of important communist party and government bodies, including the Defense Council, the collegium and the Main Military Council of the Ministry of Defense, and the General Staff. It may now also include a revived Headquarters of the Supreme High Command (Stavka Verkhovnogo Glavnokomandovaniya, or Stavka VGK). The high command directs the wide range of activities undertaken by the Ministry of Defense and the USSR as a whole to maintain and exercise the impressive military capabilities of the Soviet Armed Forces and to prepare the country for the possibility of war.<sup>1</sup>

The Politburo of the Communist Party of the Soviet Union (CPSU), the premier political decisionmaking body, oversees the peacetime activity of the high command (see Fig. 1). It would almost certainly continue to do so in wartime (see Fig. 2).

On the eve of or early in a war, the Soviets would likely resurrect the State Defense Committee, a small, top-level body that last existed during World War II. This committee, which would probably include the most important Politburo members, would direct and coordinate the overall war effort, overseeing the actual warfighting through the Stavka VGK.

The general secretary of the CPSU, presently M. S. Gorbachev, would head both the State Defense Committee and the Stavka by virtue of also serving as supreme commander in chief of the Soviet Armed Forces, a position he almost certainly holds in peacetime as well. The Stavka <sup>1</sup>Other party and government organizations that contribute to Soviet preparedness include the departments of administrative organs and defense industries of the CPSU central committee, the Military-Industrial Commission (VPK) and State Planning Committee (Gosplan) of the Council of Ministers (SSR), and the nine industrial ministries that produce military equipment. Despite the importance of these bodies, however, they are not represented in the military high command and are therefore not discussed in this study. Only the central committee secretary for defense industry sits on the Defense Council (see below, p. 6).

Although the Soviets have never published a list of the members of the Defense Council, Soviet protocol listings of Politburo members consistently associated with defense issues and analysis of similar councils in the Eastern European communist states suggest that the Defense Council is probably composed of the following officials:

- M. S. Gorbachev, CPSU general secretary (chairman)
- Ye. A. Ligachev, second-ranking secretary, CPSU central committee
- N. N. Kuznetsov, chairman, presidium, Council of Ministers
- A. A. Gromyko, chairman, presidium, Supreme Soviet
- G. N. Maslennikov, CPSU central committee secretary for defense industry
- Marshal of the Soviet Union S. I. Sokolov, minister of defense
- Marshal of the Soviet Union S. F. Akhromeyev, (chief, General Staff, executive secretary of the Defense Council)

C. M. Gerasimov, chairman, Committee for State Security (KGB), and E. A. Shevardnadze, minister of foreign affairs, also may be members of the defense council.

The General Staff of the General Staff apparently provides staff support for the defense council. One may assume that Marshal Akhromeyev, who is the commander of the General Staff, serves as executive secretary and attends defense council meetings, although probably not as a voting member.

Western analysts' analysis of the lists of Politburo members who signed the resolutions on defense-related figures between 1962 and 1980 provides strong evidence that Gorbachev, the former long-time minister of foreign affairs, and Andropov, who headed the KGB, was a member of the defense council during the 1970s and early 1980s. "Cross the Mountains of the Mountains of Defense: Derived from Statistics," Impulse, September-April 1980. An analysis of the composition of the Politburo in 1962 also suggests that Gorbachev, that the Soviet minister of foreign affairs, took on a position on the Soviet defense council. See, for example, Soviet Army and Society, Alexander L. L. member.<sup>8</sup> Nevertheless, these staffing responsibilities provide the professional military, which already possesses a near monopoly of relevant information and expertise on most defense matters,<sup>9</sup> with an excellent opportunity to shape the general agenda, the options considered, and the analyses of the options that are made available to the Defense Council members. The final decisions, however, continue to rest with the senior party members on the Defense Council.

Recognition of this preponderant military influence may well have prompted the idea of forming a civilian support staff for the Defense Council, rumored to be under consideration during Yuriy Andropov's brief tenure as general secretary in 1984. There is no indication today that this proposal was adopted.

Other Politburo members and key figures in the Soviet government and military probably attend Defense Council meetings when issues in which they play a major role are under consideration. These key figures may include, for example, other first deputy ministers of defense, the commanders in chief of the five services, the remaining deputy ministers of defense, other CPSU central committee secretaries, foreign ministry and State Planning Committee conspirators, personnel, and members of the defense-industrial leadership.

COLLEGIUM AND MAIN MILITARY COUNCIL OF THE MINISTRY OF DEFENSE

The collegium of the Ministry of Defense, Major General's (Major's) leading collective organ, helps to manage the strategic, tactical and leadership of the Soviet Armed Forces during peacetime. In addition, in Soviet fashion, it serves as an advisory body to the Politburo of defense, meeting probably twice a month, on the eve of a meeting with most of its members would likely become members of or advisers to the Stavka V GK to assist the supreme commander in chief in the direction of military operations on a global scale.

<sup>8</sup>The USSR's National Defense Committee, for example, which is equivalent to the Soviet defense ministry, has a secretariat which is the rank of colonel general and a permanent secretariat headed by a brigadier general. See Michael S. Sorkow, Warfare: The Soviet and the British Internal Fronts, New York: St. John's N.Y., 1986, pp. 19-21.

The minister of defense, Marshal S. I. Sokolov, serves as the chairman of the MoD collegium. Other members (as shown in Fig. 3) include the three first deputy ministers of defense (Marshals S. F. Akhromeyev, chief of the General Staff, and V. G. Kulikov, commander in chief of Warsaw Pact, and General of the Army P. G. Iushev, the first deputy minister for general matters), the chief of the Main Political Administration of the Army and Navy (General of the Army A. B. Izizichev) and perhaps also the first deputy chief, and the eleven deputy ministers of defense.

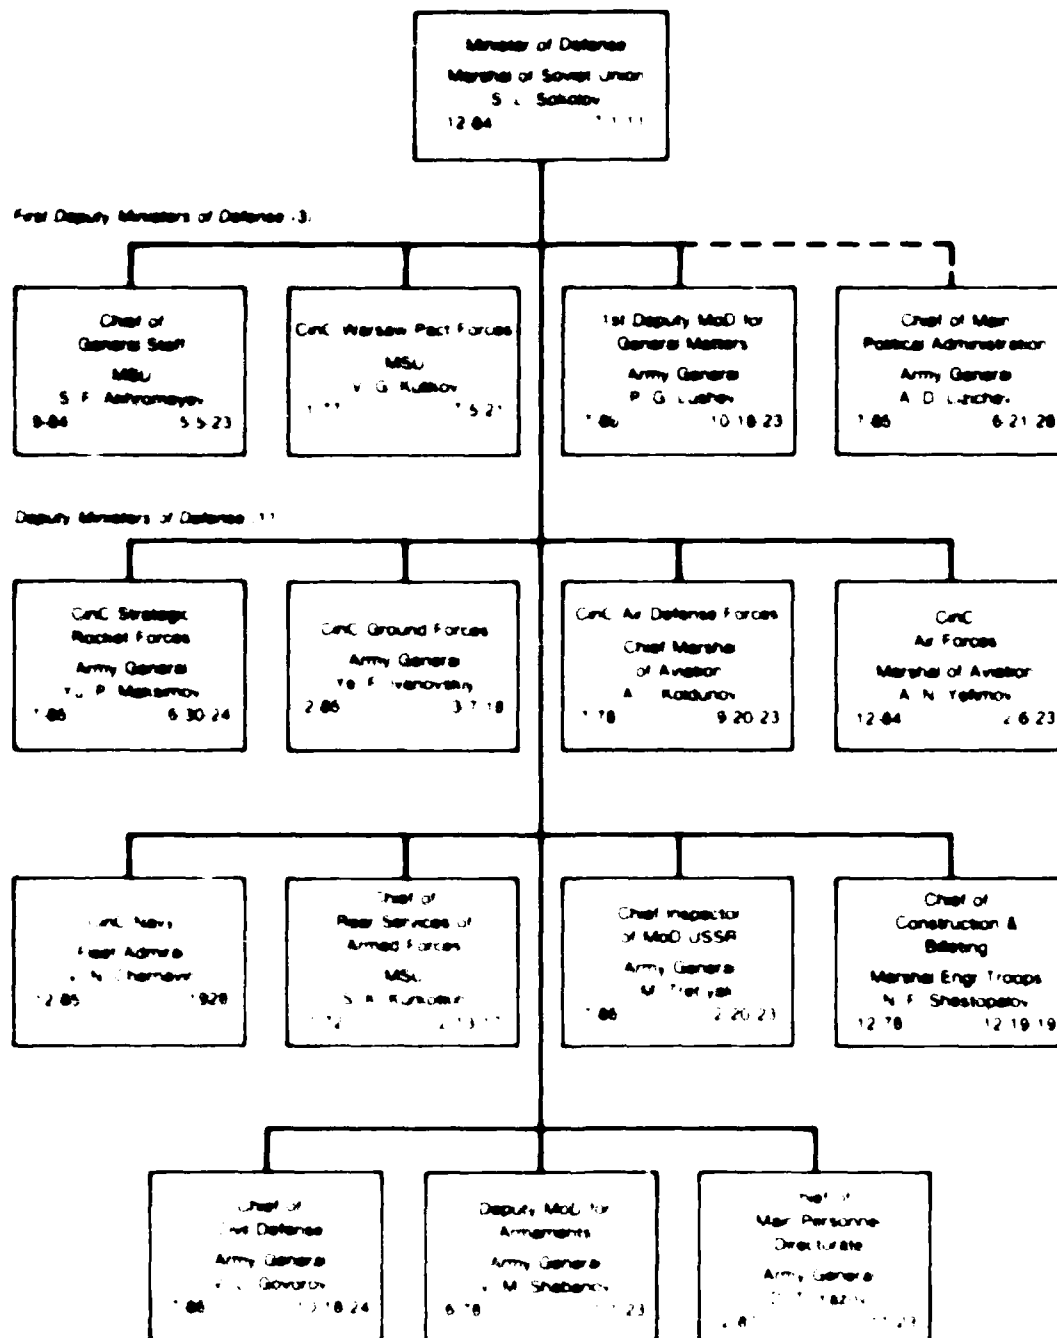

Over the years, some western students of Soviet military affairs have concluded that members of the collegium of the Ministry of Defense, together with the CPSU general secretary, also serve as the Main Military Council of the Ministry of Defense, a body that has existed off and on and in various forms since the early days of the Soviet state.<sup>11</sup> The Soviet literature has made few references to the Main Military Council during the past 20 years, and it may no longer exist.<sup>12</sup>

Alternatively, the Main Military Council may be much larger than the collegium, including not only the senior MoD leadership in Moscow but also the commanders and senior political officers of the four high commands of theaters of military operations (teatry voyennyykh deystviy [TVDs]), the sixteen military districts into which the USSR is divided, the four groups of forces in eastern Europe, the four fleets, and the five air defense districts.<sup>13</sup>

<sup>12</sup>The entry for "Voennoye upravleniye" in the Encyclopedia Sovetskaya, p. 19, indicates that the council functioned off and on until 1957, when the army, navy, and air force were reorganized into the present Ministry of Defense of the USSR.

GENERAL STAFF

The General Staff, the central planning and directing organ of the Soviet Armed Forces, operates under the direction of the minister of defense and the MoD collegium. It provides the vital specialized support in peacetime, crisis, and war that connects the highest political leadership and the Stavka V GK with the various elements of the Soviet strategic and general purpose military forces.

The General Staff is responsible for strategic planning for the Soviet Armed Forces and for determining the goals that each military service must fulfill. It also coordinates the activities of the main staffs of the five services--the Strategic Rocket Forces (SRF), the Ground Forces, the Air Defense (PVO) Forces, the Air Forces (VVS), and the Navy--as well as the staffs of the Rear Services, Civil Defense, the military districts, the groups of forces abroad, the fleets, and the air defense districts.<sup>11</sup> In peacetime, it advises the Defense Council on military and military-political matters and develops military strategy for review and approval by the Defense Council.

In time of war, the General Staff would act as the operating organ of the Stavka V GK, directing the efforts of the main staffs of the SRF, PVO Forces, and Navy and the high commands of the regional theaters of military operations, in accordance with Stavka directives. In this role, the General Staff would oversee the development of plans for and help to coordinate the combat operations of Soviet land, air, sea, and missile forces operating in contiguous and overseas TMs. Once the Stavka approved these plans, the General Staff would issue them as orders to the commanders in chief of the regional TMs and to the commanders in chief of the services that operate independently.

HEADQUARTERS OF THE SUPREME HIGH COMMAND (STAVKA V GK)

Because the transition from peace to war may occur quickly in the nuclear age, the Soviets almost certainly have made peacetime arrangements for the prompt initiation of military operations, in particular the rapid recourse to the use of nuclear weapons. A perceived need for such arrangements led a group of Soviet military leaders, including Marshals Ogarkov and Kulikov, to make public suggestions during the 1970s that a high-level military body be established in peacetime.<sup>15</sup>

If their efforts succeeded, the Stavka V GK stands prepared in peacetime to assume responsibility on short notice, should circumstances dictate, for the overall direction of Soviet military operations in the event of war.<sup>16</sup> If the Stavka V GK does not now exist, the Soviets would most likely recreate it on the eve of or early in a war.

Soviet practices during world war II suggest that Gorbachev, the CPSU general secretary and supreme commander in chief, heads (or would head) the Stavka V GK. Other members probably include Marshal Sokolov, the minister of defense, Marshal Akhromeyev, first deputy minister of defense and chief of the General Staff, Marshal Kulikov, first deputy minister of defense and commander in chief of Warsaw Pact forces, and General of the Army Iashev, first deputy minister of defense for general matters.<sup>17</sup> It may also include Ligachev, the second-ranking secretary of the CPSU central committee.<sup>18</sup>

<sup>15</sup>See, for example, Marshal V. G. Kulikov, "The Strategic Leadership of the Armed Forces," Voenno-istoricheskii zhurnal (Military History Journal), No. 6, June 1975, pp. 12-24, and Marshal N. V. Ogarkov, "Strategiya voennaya," Sovetskaya voennaya entsiklopediya (Soviet Military Encyclopedia), Voennoye izdatel'stvo, Moscow, Vol. 7, 1979, p. 565.

<sup>17</sup>The final world war II Stavka V GK, appointed by the State Defense Committee in February 1945, included I. V. Stalin (supreme commander in chief), G. K. Zhukov (deputy supreme commander), A. M. Vasilevskiy (commander, Third Belorussian Front), A. I. Antonov (chief of staff), N. A. Bulganin (deputy people's commissar [minister] of defense), and N. S. Fuznetsov (people's commissar of the Navy). "Stavka Verkhnyogo Glavokomandovaniya," Voennyy entsiklopedicheskii slovar', p. 235.

<sup>18</sup>Some western analysts have suggested that Marshal N. V. Ogarkov, who was removed from the post of chief of the General Staff to assume another unspecified assignment in September 1984, has become the first deputy supreme commander in chief of the Soviet Armed Forces. Should

The following deputy ministers of defense might be expected to advise the Stavka on matters relating to their particular expertise and to attend some of its meetings: General of the Army Maksimov, commander in chief of the Strategic Rocket Forces; General of the Army Ivanovskiy, commander in chief of the Ground Forces; Chief Marshal of Aviation Koldunov, commander in chief of Air Defense Forces; Marshal of Aviation Yefimov, commander in chief of the Air Forces; and Fleet Admiral Chernavin, commander in chief of the Navy. Army Generals Lizichev, chief of the Main Political Administration, and V. M. Chebrikov, chairman of the KGB, might also attend.

The broader responsibility for deciding to go to war in the first place or to use nuclear weapons almost certainly rests with the Politburo as a whole, if time permits. If time is short but still sufficient to allow consultation, the Moscow-based Politburo members or possibly the more exclusive Defense Council may be empowered to make such momentous decisions. Finally, in the event of a sudden escalation during a political crisis or an enemy surprise nuclear attack, Gorbachev himself could probably make these decisions, acting, in effect, as the Soviet "national command authority."<sup>18</sup>

SOVIET ARMED FORCES

The five military services all operate under the direction of the General Staff. The heart of the Soviet Armed Forces, they include:

- Strategic Rocket Forces (400,000 troops).<sup>19</sup> Established in 1959 to control intermediate- and intercontinental-range ballistic missiles deployed throughout the USSR, the SRF has traditionally been designated the foremost service of the Soviet Armed Forces.<sup>20</sup> this be the case, he would also be a member of the VGK. The authors believe, however, that Marshal Ogarkov is serving solely as the commander in chief of the Western TVD, a critical field command but one that does not merit his inclusion on the VGK.

<sup>19</sup>Troop strengths are drawn from The Military Balance 1986-1987, International Institute for Strategic Studies, London, 1986, pp. 36-39.

- Ground Forces (1,991,000 troops). Previously recognized as the most important Soviet service, the advent of nuclear weapons and long-range ballistic missiles has pushed the Ground Forces into second place behind the SRF.<sup>21</sup>
- Air Defense (PVO) Forces (371,000 troops). Renamed and reorganized in the late 1970s, the PVO forces include both the units that defend the USSR against aircraft and missile attack and the mobile air defense units that would accompany the Ground Forces in operations within and beyond the Soviet frontiers.
- Air Forces (453,000 troops). These forces include heavy and medium bombers, tactical fighters, fighter-bombers, armed helicopters, and transport aviation.
- Navy (451,000 troops). The Navy has attained true oceanic capabilities over the past three decades. It has the greatest degree of independence among the services, having on two occasions operated as a separate ministry. Nevertheless, it traditionally appears last in service protocol listings.

The five services are responsible for training and equipping their personnel so that they are able to fulfill the combined-arms and independent operational missions called for in the plans drawn up by the General Staff. Most of the ground, air, and air defense units would be called upon in wartime to operate in multiservice, combined-arms operations under the direction of the high commands in the various theaters and their subordinate front and army commands.

by the SRF, include SS-4 and SS-20. Shorter-range nuclear missiles such as the SS-12/22, described as "intermediate-range nuclear forces" for purposes of U.S.-Soviet arms control, fall under the command of the Ground Forces.

<sup>21</sup>Greatly increased Soviet emphasis over the past several years on preparations for combined-arms warfare with conventional weapons in regional theaters, a parallel practice of referring to the Soviet "triad of strategic nuclear forces," and the naming of a former theater CinC with long ground force experience, General of the Army Maksimov, as the CinC of the SRF, have prompted some to conclude that the SRF has lost influence relative to the Ground Forces. Nevertheless, the SRF continues to lead the five services in protocol listings.

Units of the Strategic Rocket Forces, the heavy bombers of the Moscow Air Army, the majority of the units from the Air Defense Forces, and naval units not directly involved in support of amphibious operations on the flanks of the ground forces would also operate independently in carrying out wartime missions. These could include the execution of nuclear-armed missile and long-range air strikes against targets deep within the enemy's rear, air defense operations to protect the Soviet homeland, and naval operations in oceanic theaters, all carried out in accordance with plans developed by the service main staffs, approved by the General Staff, and executed under the direction of the commanders in chief of the respective services.

II. SOVIET MILITARY REGIONAL COMMANDS

Regional commands would direct the wartime operations of most Soviet forces. Many of these--the high commands of forces in the four TVDs, the commands of the four groups of forces abroad, and the commands of forces in the sixteen military districts in the USSR, five air defense districts, and four fleets--play significant roles in peacetime as well (see Fig. 4).

THEATERS OF MILITARY OPERATIONS

In wartime, the Soviets evidently plan to utilize high commands in a few selected theaters of military operations to permit centralized control of strategic planning and decentralized battle management of the armed forces.<sup>1</sup> Within the past few years, the Soviets apparently have established high commands of forces in the Western, Southwestern, Southern, and Far Eastern TVDs. A fifth high command would likely be formed to direct forces in the Northwestern TVD should a war involve extensive operations in this area.

In wartime, the high commands of TVD forces would be subordinate to the Stavka VGH, which would direct their activities through the General Staff. The high commands would be responsible for coordinating the efforts of subordinate fronts and armies. The commanders in chief of these TVD high commands would have at their disposal not only the ground force units, but also the air and naval elements assigned to the TVD.<sup>2</sup> In the event of a nuclear conflict, they might be supported as well by <sup>1</sup>According to the U.S. Defense Department, the Soviets have identified ten continental and four oceanic TVDs: the Northwestern, Western, Southwestern, Southern, Far Eastern, North American, South American, African, Australian, Antarctic, Arctic Ocean, Atlantic Ocean, Indian Ocean, and Pacific Ocean TVDs. See Soviet Military Power 1986, U.S. Department of Defense, U.S. Government Printing Office, Washington, D.C., March 1986, pp. 12-14. The vast majority of these theaters do not in peacetime and would not in wartime have military operations directed by regional high commands.

<sup>2</sup>For discussions of the composition and command arrangements of the high commands of TVDs, see John F. Hines and Phillip A. Peterson, "Changing the Soviet System of Control: Forces in Theater Warfare," International Defense Review, March 1986, pp. 281-286; Jack Sullivan and *Date in each box represents first time incumbent was identified in that position.

 †In wartime, the command of the Leningrad MD would likely form the high command of the Northwestern TVD, which does not exist in peacetime, and forces of the Leningrad MD would operate under the Northwestern TVD high command.

Fig. 4—Soviet regional commands

SRF strikes against targets that the TVD high commands had helped to choose.

The high command of the Western TVD forces is responsible for planning operations in Central Europe in an area roughly analogous to NATO's Central Region. The forces available to this high command include the air and ground force units of the groups of Soviet forces in the GDR, Poland, and Czechoslovakia; the air and ground force units from the Baltic, Belorussian, and Carpathian military districts; the naval units of the Baltic Fleet; and the air, ground, and naval forces of the GDR, Poland, and Czechoslovakia (see Fig. 5a).

The high command of the Southwestern TVD forces is charged with planning operations in southern Europe, including NATO's Southern Region. This high command has at its disposal the air and ground force units of the Southern Group of Soviet Forces in Hungary; the air and ground force units of the Odessa and Kiev military districts; the naval units of the Black Sea Fleet and the Mediterranean Squadron; and the national armed forces of Hungary, Bulgaria, and possibly Romania (see Fig. 5b).

The high command of the Southern TVD forces is responsible for planning operations in Southwest Asia, including Afghanistan, Iran, eastern Turkey, and Pakistan. This high command has available the air and ground force units of the Soviet forces in Afghanistan; the air and ground force units of the North Caucasus, Transcaucasus, and Turkestan military districts; the naval units of the Caspian Flotilla, and the air and ground forces of Afghanistan (see Fig. 5c).

The high command of the Far Eastern TVD forces is in charge of planning operations in the region covering Mongolia, China, the Koreas, Vietnam, and Japan. This high command has at its disposal the air and ground force units of the independent Soviet army in Mongolia, the air and ground force units of the the Central Asian, Siberian, Transbaykal, and Far Eastern military districts; the naval forces of the Pacific Fleet; and elements of the Mongolian national air and ground forces (see Fig. 5d).

GROUPS OF FORCES

The four groups of Soviet forces in Eastern Europe serve as the key element in the Warsaw Pact forces. They both ensure that the Eastern European states remain under Soviet political domination and provide a framework for Soviet support of the others' security and defensive operations against NATO. The Soviet Union uses them as an independent army in Mongolia and as a reserve force as well as a guarantee of Soviet hegemony in the Mongolian Peoples Republic and potential participation in future operations against China.

The commanders of the Eastern European groups of forces appear to have several tasks: to coordinate organizational and operational matters, to coordinate functions under the direction of the Soviet General Staff. These commanders may also operate, at least in peacetime, under the direction of Marshal S. G. Zhukov, the Chief of Warsaw Pact forces, and his multinational Warsaw Pact Staff, headed by Soviet General of the Army A. A. Golitsky.<sup>2</sup> Finally, they are also responsible for planning, executing, and coordinating arriving out operations under the direction of the units of the high commands of the Western and Southwestern TVDs.

The four groups of Soviet forces are the following:

- Group of Soviet Forces Germany (GSFG)--ten tank, nine motorized rifle, and one artillery division
- Northern Group of Forces (Poland)--two tank divisions
- Central Group of Forces (Czechoslovakia)--two tank and three motorized rifle divisions

<sup>2</sup>We know neither the peacetime nor the wartime responsibilities of Marshal Zhukov and his staff. Some suggest that in the event of a global war, they would provide the nucleus for the high command of the European theater of war, which would direct the efforts of the high commands in all three European theaters of military operations. Alternatively, they might continue to coordinate the war-support efforts of the Soviet Union and its East European allies without participating in the chain of command for the direction of combat operations.

- Southern Group of Forces (Hungary --two tank and two motorized rifle divisions)

The GSFG is the largest and most important Soviet group of forces in Eastern Europe. Unlike the other three groups, which are headed simply by commanders, GSFG has a commander in chief. The position of CinC of the GSFG has traditionally served as a springboard to higher posts in the Soviet military establishment (see Appendix A).

MILITARY DISTRICTS

The Soviet Union is divided into sixteen military districts (MDs) (see Fig. 6). Military district commanders, like commanders of groups of forces abroad, come under the direct control of the Ministry of Defense and receive general direction from the General Staff, Ground Forces headquarters, and possibly Air Defense Forces headquarters. Military districts function primarily to train and mobilize troops so as to ensure a high level of combat readiness.

Military district commanders have direct control over both ground and air forces capable of waging independent military actions. Forces in 12 of the 16 military districts have probably been designated for wartime service under the direction of one of the four TVD high commands that exist in peacetime. Of the remaining four military districts, the Leningrad MD would serve in wartime as the core element for the creation of a fifth high command that would oversee operations in the Northwestern TVD (see Figs. 4 and 5a, above), if Soviet troops were expected to fight in that area. Forces in the Moscow, Volga, and Ural MDs, located in the center of the USSR, apparently form the central reserve (see Fig. 4, above).

The most combat-ready formations in the MDs will move out of their permanent garrison areas in wartime to conduct operations in adjacent theaters under the direction of the appropriate TVD high commands. The MD itself would continue to function, forming, equipping, and training new military formations for subsequent entry into the war and serving as a central element for the maintenance of the domestic political and economic order and the conduct of local defense.

Fig. 6 Soviet military districts and fleets

FLEETS

The Soviet Navy includes the Northern, Pacific, Baltic, and Black Sea fleets (see Fig. 6, above). These four commands, along with those of the Caspian Flotilla and the Leningrad Naval Base, function under the direction of the Main Staff of the Navy for all matters of organization, mobilization, and operations. The Main Staff of the Navy, in turn, apparently operates within general guidelines established by the General Staff. The Main Staff of the Navy, again operating within the broader strategic plans developed by the General Staff and approved by the Stavka V GK, would probably plan and direct wartime oceanic operations when the fleets were not operating in direct support of a land-based TVD high command.<sup>5</sup>

<sup>5</sup> Sergei Samashev, a RAND consultant, points out that the appointment of Fleet Admiral V. N. Chernavin, an advocate of the combined-arms approach, as deputy minister of defense and commander in chief of the Navy suggests that the fleets are being integrated into TVD operational planning.

Subsequent career patterns of former commanders of the various groups of forces and military districts indicate that certain regional commands are more important than others. As Table A-1 shows, the command of the group of Soviet forces Germany and of forces of the Belorussian military district, Kiev, for example, and the MSU, which has frequently served as a steppingstone for promotion to the highest military rank--Marshal of the Soviet Union (MSU) and top positions of great responsibility in the Ministry of Defense.<sup>1</sup>

As a result of the above, the authors have concluded that the use of the proposed model for the analysis of the data obtained from the tests of the specimens of the composite material is not only possible, but also convenient. The authors also believe that the proposed model can be used for the analysis of the data obtained from the tests of other types of composite materials.

Appendix B

RECENT SOVIET MILITARY PERSONNEL CHANGES

Since Andropov's death in February 1984 and his replacement by Chernenko as CPSU general secretary and chairman of the Defense Council, an unusual combination of transfers, reorganizations, retirements, and deaths has led to more than 45 personnel changes in the Soviet military establishment.<sup>1</sup> The first major change occurred in September 1984, when Marshal Akhromeyev suddenly replaced Marshal Ogarkov as a first deputy minister of defense and chief of the General Staff and Ogarkov apparently took command of the Western TVD.<sup>2</sup> Three months later, Marshal Ustinov, the minister of defense, died, and Marshal Sokolov, a first deputy minister, succeeded him.

In March 1985, following Chernenko's death, Gorbachev took over as CPSU general secretary and chairman of the Defense Council. Some of the 24 subsequent military personnel changes may reflect Gorbachev's obvious willingness to bring to power men who are both younger and more modern in their outlook and his determination to move aside more senior commanders who may have opposed his policies.

The Soviet military leadership changes since February 1984 are shown in Table B.1. Figure B.1 compares the MoD collegiums of February 1984 and February 1987. Tables B.2 and B.3 trace changes in the top leadership of the Ministry of Defense and in the regional commands.

<sup>1</sup>See, for example, Ulrich-Joachim Schulz-Torge, "The Soviet Military High Command," Parts I and II, Military Technology, August 1985, pp. 111-121, and September 1985, pp. 102-110, and Radio Free Europe/Radio Liberty, "Commanders of military districts, groups of forces, and fleets of the USSR," RS 204/86, December 15, 1986.

<sup>2</sup>Some speculate that Marshal Ogarkov has become the deputy supreme commander in chief of the Soviet Armed Forces, thus providing him with responsibilities well beyond the confines of the Western TVD.
